

Choosing Our Lott

Sen. Trent Lott 'did right'. Is that just a Southern saying or what? Because we need to do right, or lose the GOP base. We cast our lot as Republicans on the morality of Lott's resignation. We keep the moral high ground, only if we are determined to fight for right.

A senate leader can be sensitive, yet not fold at the first sign of race bait. Sen. Lott's pathetic, pandering, groveling apology tour was a terrible weakness for Republicans. More liberal race baiting already started with the new GOP leader. That moral pariah, Al Sharpton, visited, counseled and now waits to judge Sen. Frist with liberal prejudice. Sen. Frist and Republicans will never 'step and fetchit' fast enough or long enough for the Democrat racists.

The moral outrage from Conservatives at Lott's utter ignorance and insensitivity was well placed. Seriously, Republicans maintain the double standard rightly. Republicans are culpable for moral failings but Democrats are responsible only to preserve power.

Republicans must have the backbone, brain and guts to tell the truth, forcefully, in love. Speak up about Dr. Martin Luther King Jr's tremendous victory – among Whites, especially among conservatives, and throughout the South – in the name of Christianity

The transformation of the human heart on racial prejudice is almost complete among Southern, White, Christian, conservative Republicans. Racism is dead. Racism is a sin – seen in the same light as segregation and slavery. The descendants of the defenders of both immoralities renounce the sins of their ancestors. Since their transformation is sincere, most don't feel the urge for more groveling reconciliation for what is over. They don't hate the honor, courage and fidelity aspects of their whole history, because they have already repudiated the evil part.

The sinfulness of racialism shifted to the left. The liberals still see people with prejudice, not as individuals, but as objects in groups. Tragically, the fears of the formerly oppressed are fanned into fires by race-baiting Judas 'leaders'. People who make their living on the basis of their skin color promote a new racism. The language of the old race baiters ironically morphed into the words white and black liberals who say they hate racism. It's amazing. Like - separate, but equal - college dorms, business and professional associations, etc.

Racial politics, like racial prejudice, requires one mind set. No thinking, no individuality, allowed. Harry Belafonte and others use the imagery of slavery times because liberal racism is the new plantation. It's vital to keep Blacks – Hispanics, Asians (when convenient), Muslims, atheists, women, and homosexuals as permanent classes of victims. To keep the slaves on the socialist, elitist liberal place you need a permanent cast of villains.

Enter Republicans, Whites, southerners, conservatives, males, Christians – in frozen prejudiced stereotypes. Every chance the liberals can, they will marginalize anything said, simply because the official boogie men said it. How wonderful to point to your political enemy's labels – their membership in oppressor groups – and denigrate everything they say in a swoop. Liberals can defeat ideas by intimidation without engaging them. Simply attack the speaker for their being.

The race bullies will blast at less and less and no offense at all. Have the brain to know racial insensitivity when it happens, like Lott's false praise and a former Ku Klux Klanner saying 'white n-word'. Have the backbone to stand for right. Have the guts to stand and fight the next assault in cultural cleansing – whether it's Southern or Christian heritage. Deny guilt because guilt is gone. Attack the attacks based on liberal prejudiced assumptions. Reject the premises. Pursue a conservative Republican agenda for a color blind America with courage. This is our good lot.
